The Twenty-First day of April, Twenty-Hundred and Two

Whereas the population of persons in Ibrosia should be controlled in some way, and
Whereas immigration banning and limiting is unconstitutional

Therefore,

- I. Should the population of the Province of Redéke Island and Dependences be greater than twelve on the night of a full moon, it shall be perfectly legal to shoot a Welshman with a bow and arrow on Niweilk Isle, under the assumption at least two Welshmen reside within the Ibrosian Democracy.
- II. This shooting may only be carried out should the aforementioned Welshman have passed bodily fluids within the province within the past five days.
- III. Should it be that the aforesated Welshman does not die from injuries inflicted, he shall be compensated by the archer for the value of clothing ruined and medical bills – in pre decimalised British currency and presented with a folded British Union Flag, Welsh Dragon Flag, a leaf of purple heather and a dram of single malt whiskey, aged at least eight years.
- IV. Should it be that the Welshman shot should die, the archer must pay funeral costs, including the cost of draping the coffin with a St David's Cross and present the mother of the deceased with a Hilton Hotels emergency sowing kit, and the father with a family sized packet of sherbet lemons.
- V. The archer must then proceed to the nearest Public House to engage in a drunken dance, symbolic of the killing and involving some form of stag impersonation.
- VI. The details of the deceased should be then sent by courier to the Office of the Governor of the Senate, by the archer in Latin.
- VII. Should this not arrive within fifty days of the incident, the archer shall be liable for a public spanking and shall be forced to sing 'Land of Hope and Glory' in the Glasgow City Chambers while dressed in a white shell suit and baseball cap, with a small gold earring on his or her left ear.
